I offer you a second catalogue con- dinner at the Union Club. Galleries has every reason to believe are the work of Renoir. The existence of these drawings in New York city has been known to us for over nine years, when they were the property of the Baroness von Zimmerman, a very rich woman, who was well known in Paris art circles, who died two years ago in Los Angeles.

"The authenticity of these drawings has been questioned, but I am conducting an auction sale and not an art and privilege to offer these drawings to you for sale. A very large question has been raised by the oriticism of these drawings, and it is Mr. Mitchell Kenerley's intention at the earliest opportunity to announce a meeting in this com at which he will make a full and comblete statement as to the authenticity of these drawings and the motives bebeen made upon him, after which any ritic, collector or other person will be invited to speak."

BEETHOVEN SCHOLARSHIPS.

The Beethoven Association, just clos ing its first season, will continue its activities next year under the same name but with a wider scope. At its first an-nual dinner last Thursday, which the founder, Harold Bauer, attended, the or-ganization, at the suggestion of Mr. Bauer and O. G. Sonneck, decided to apply a portion of the fund which the notable concerts of the association have earned to the publication of H. E. Krehof Beethoven" as the organization's part in the celebration of the 150th anniversary of the composer's birth.

The biography, which will be published under the auspices of the association, is in three large volumes. Thayer cave fifty years of his life to the compilation of the work, and Mr. Krehbiel devoted ten years to the preparation of the English translation. Another result of English translation. the meeting was the decision to estab-lish scholarships in music schools for players of orchestral wind instruments.

"The Blue Bird's" Farewell.

There were two performances at the Metropolitan Opera House yesterday. In the afternoon Albert Wolf's opera, "The Blue Bird," was given for the last time with the usual cast, except that Gladys Axman replaced Mme. Easton, who had sung in "Le Prophete" the previous evening. The opera last night was Tschalkowsky's "Eugene Onegin," sung for the last time. Mme. Louise Berat substituted for Mme. Kathleen Howard as Filipievas. The other singers were the same as before. The audiences at both performances were large.

He quickly right about faced the American Telephone and Telegraph Halting the expensive warfare against independents, he permitted his rivals to buy Bell instruments. Outside the company he gathered a precious stock of good will; within he swept away all listlessness. The panic of 1907 came and went, but such was Mr. Vail's finan-cial management that he was able to report that net earnings had increased more than $2,000.00 and that the company had $18,000,000 in the bank and would not need to borrow another cent for two years. He became so interested as president until 1919, and thereafter, as chairman of the board, continued to direct the company's policy.

Mr. Vail was born on a farm in Carroll county. Ohlo, on July 16, 1845. His mother's ancestors were Dutch and French, his father's were English Quakers. The father.
